Rugby World Cup Sevens 2013
Moscow, Russia

BLOG: Thursday 27 June

Cheech, aka KATRINA BARKER aka Katya

Today we officially became locals! Each team is provided two liaison officers for the duration of their stay, to hang out with while out and about. Olga and Katarina are both local students in their twenties, and they have been giving us our Russian names!

Needless to say, it had us in hysterics on the bus to training this morning. We've a couple of names that have really stuck and will no doubt stick around well past the last flight out of Moscow.

On top of some new names today also saw the creation of a daily award. Ditz of the Day went to Charlotte, aka Svetlana. We were all at breakfast, guys and girls, and Charlotte, who had been searching for pineapple flavoured yoghurt for the past three days finally found one. So excited, she proceeded to drop it on the floor and it went all over her and half the Canadians! It was hilarious - but I think you had to be there ☺

Anyway, have to dash. We're heading out to Red Square, how exciting!
